

Rethinking development: Coming together to act for systems change

Friday 11 December 2015, 10:00-12:00

Salle Ferrer, Bourse du Travail, Paris 10e (Metro: République)

System change and not climate change! There is more and more awareness of the double environmental and social crisis and the risk of humanity bringing about its own destruction. Despite increasing scientific evidence of trespassing ecological limits with unforeseen consequences, and of widening inequalities, not enough action at all levels is taken to change course. How to join forces to make this paradigm shift a reality?

This workshop will aim to exchange on experiences in engaging political actors and our publics on the need to rethink our models of society and economy. And to identify what unites us in our different struggles, to imagine new ways of working together for systemic change. To share strategies and ideas for collective actions that can help to build new stories and unite people's power especially beyond the Paris COP21.

World People's Assembly, Lima, 2014 © CIDSE

With:

- Ivo Lesbaupin, Iser Assessoria and ABONG, Brazil
- Humberto Ortiz, CEAS, Peru and the Pan-Amazonian Ecclesiastical Network
- Shalmali Guttal, Focus on the Global South, Thailand
- Francis Ngang, INADES Formation, Ivory Coast
- Colin L'Ériger, Quebec Federation of Labour (FTQ), Canada

Moderator: Denise Auclair, CIDSE

This event is co-organized by CIDSE, DKA/KOO, ABONG, CEAS, IBASE, Rural Women's Assembly, PACS.