

WORKSHOP

Developing the Right to Say no in Europe

7th December, 14:00-16:00 CEST | Online

This workshop aims to bring local experts and activists together to bring the global struggle to the EU and develop a Europe-wide action on the Right to Say No.

As well as exacerbating climate change, pollution, and biodiversity loss, mining has direct economic and socio-cultural impacts on local communities.

All local communities affected by mining projects should have the right to co-decide whether mining activities will start or continue in their backyard. This belief in community involvement in political, economic, and environmental decision-making is epitomised in the right-to-say-no, which is the inalienable and collective right of a community to say 'No' to extractive projects on their land.

In this workshop we want to collect feedback on the RTSN legal toolbox that we are developing, discuss European views on a global RTSN document and to work towards an action plan to implement the RTSN in Europe

We need your experience to guide our effort. Let's assert the Right to Say No together!
